The theory that spring is delaying to let the frost get out of the ground is gaining supporters every day.

Gov. Hartness calls upon Vermont people to set out more trees and protect those we already have. Which would surely make a tree-mendous state. Let's go and do it.

After we have dumped several thousand tons of so-called waste granite into places, from which it can never be reclaimed, we may find that waste granite can be put to some better use. That's merely a possibility.

That $23,500 verdict against the Boston & Maine railroad and in favor of the widow of a victim of a grade crossing accident would have gone far toward the elimination of that particular crossing. Incidentally, the verdict was a strong argument in favor of restoring to the full the program of elimination of a crossing each year by every railroad operating in Vermont.

John F. Fitzgerald, former mayor of Boston and one time a congressman, still retains that self-assurance, which was a dominating factor during the years when he was at the height of his political triumphs; he now comes out with a proposal to run for governor of Massachusetts on a Democratic ticket. Massachusetts will make short work of Mr. Fitzgerald's ambitions, even though his party does not.

Back in some of the hill sections of Vermont they have not even started to gather the sap buckets and teams in the woods are being stuck in snowdrifts. In the "southern slope" sugar woods, the annual sugar making operations are over, with a fair record of achievement. The returns from the less springlike sections ought to bring Vermont's total production of maple products well to the top notch despite some reports of only a mediocre season. In any event, the season has not been so full of discouragements as some years have been, the latter with a great deal of preparation made and with only a very short run of sap to work on.

Whatever may be any of the waning faculties of Woodrow Wilson, if any, his capacity for writing a stinging letter is not one of them. His letter declaring Senator Reed of Missouri (a fellow party man) to be "incapable of sustained allegiance to any person or any cause" and asserting that he (Wilson) will "never willingly consent to any further association with him" reads as if the pen must have been dipped in vitriol of the most biting strength. The letter also displays that Wilson, while recovering his health, has not recovered from that irascibility of temper which was a dominating trait during the trying times of his service in the presidency.

Bellows Falls business men are opposed to the adoption of the daylight saving system in their community. Indeed, no community in Vermont, so far as we have heard, has decided to change time this year in conformity with the system to be put in force in Massachusetts soon. The idea worked out well during the World War period as far as manufacturing interests were concerned, but the necessity for the idea seems to have been eliminated with the close of the war and the return to less feverish productive activity. Vermont as a state certainly does not require daylight saving, albeit there probably are special cases in

PAINFUL NEURITIS

Mrs. Morris Kratz of No. 2 Judson street, Hartford, Conn., suffered from poor circulation, neuritis and indigestion. Her case shows what can be done in such a complication of troubles by building up the blood.

"I had awful pains in my back and hips. When I got up in the morning I could not stand straight. My knees were like ice and I was in torment all of the time. My digestion was affected and I had severe stomach pains after eating."

"Nothing helped me until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Then the change was wonderful. I do not have any of the pains any more nor any indigestion. I feel better than I have felt in many years. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to many others and shall be glad to tell anybody what they have done for me."

which daylight saving might prove beneficial in more than one respect.

According to the estimate made by the publisher of the Burlington city directory, the population of that city is now 26,000, which would be a gain of approximately 3,220 since 1920, or more than a thousand people a year. Such a gain does not seem at all probable, for the number is more than Burlington gained in the entire census period from 1910 to 1920 and, too, there has not been such an impetus to business in Burlington as to call for such an influx of population during the last two or three years. It is good news that Burlington is showing signs of progress and gain in population, but we shall have to temper our joy considerably below what the publisher of the directory would put it.

The Burlington Free Press declared it was informed a representative of the state administration visited the Brattleboro Retreat and "found things that needed explaining," while Gov. Hartness, in response to a request from the Brattleboro Reformer, declared that the Burlington paper's comment gave an erroneous impression and that there had been "no particular change in the situation at the institution." If Gov. Hartness' intent was to clarify the erroneous impression said to have been given by the Free Press, he certainly did not accomplish the purpose because the public was more mystified than ever by the form of expression used by the state's chief executive. Just what is "the situation" at the Brattleboro Retreat is something that has the public interested at the present time.

FINANCING EUROPE.

While it undoubtedly is not within the province of the United States government to interfere with or prevent the floating of a German government loan in the United States, or the loan of any other government, for that matter, it is reasonable and wise for the United States government to exercise a sort of supervising force in the matter. Evidences are not wanting that some Americans will buy anything if the article is sufficiently set forth in glowing colors; and this childlike faith has resulted in serious losses to many people. If any Tom, Dick or Harry of a nation comes over here and, without restriction and without proper credentials and without proper assurances, endeavors to separate the American people from their money in return for some paper, which may prove no more binding than a "scrap of paper," it is almost certain that a great deal of money will go out of the United States with a perpetual good-bye attached to it. That is not to say that money loaned to the German government would certainly go that way; but it is to say that American money should be on its guard constantly against doubtful government paper emanating from Europe, Asia or any other place than the United States. In order to put up that guard, the United States government would be justified in acting in the position of counselor for the American people if in no other position.

January 1st, 1735, Paul Revere was born in Boston. He made his famous ride from Boston to Lexington, April 18th-19th, 1775. If he had the job to do today, instead of using the horse, or the auto, or aeroplane or 'phone, probably he'd be sitting comfortably at home in one of our knicker sport suits sending his messages by radio.

MONEY AND CHECKS MISSING.

$2,500 Disappeared Between Richmond R. R. Station and St. Albans.

Richford, April 20.—Money and checks to the amount of $2,500 sent from the Central Vermont railway station to St. Albans are missing and a railroad detective is trying to locate the thief. According to the story, Station Master A. C. Coddere, who was temporarily being assisted by his brother, placed the money and checks in two envelopes and sent them by a messenger to the American Express company's office. The express agent refused to return a receipt for one of the packages which was undressed. Mrs. Coddere, wife of the station master, said both packages were addressed when they left the station. She, however, readressed the unmarked envelope.

When the two packages reached St. Albans it was found that the one which had been readressed contained nothing but paper.

SERVICE

The word "SERVICE" is a much abused term and as a figure of speech is sadly overworked in much of the current commercial and financial advertising.

For an institution to advertise to give service and then intentionally or otherwise fail to live up to its word, is a breach of faith which in these times of increasing obligation and responsibility, cannot be condoned.

We mention herewith some of the services of this bank, many of which are rendered without compensation, and we shall let you and those whom we have assisted in any or all of these matters judge for yourselves whether we are maintaining a truly helpful attitude. In succeeding advertisements we shall explain in detail these services and their value to you as a present or prospective depositor of this bank.

Information Service
Income Tax Service
Investment Service
Liberty Bond Service
Travel Service
Trust Department Service
Safe Deposit Service.

A bank can only prosper as it seeks to promote the prosperity of those with whom it comes in contact, and a large part of this promotional work, to insure its fullest success, must be rendered impartially and unselfishly.

We believe we have helped many of our friends to firmly establish themselves financially in business or investment matters, and their continued confidence and loyalty to this institution is all the compensation which we can expect.
